With 44 Rx opioid-related deaths a day, what can one physician do?

More than you might think. Registering for and using state prescription drug monitoring programs (PDMP), for example, can be an important step to help you make more informed prescribing decisions.

The AMA Task Force to Reduce Opioid Abuse—composed of the American Medical Association, more than 25 specialty and state medical societies, and other national health care organizations—is identifying key resources and actions, including encouraging physicians to enhance their education on effective, evidence-based prescribing. Together with all prescribers, we can combat this epidemic and protect our patients.

Be part of the solution.

Visit ama-assn.org/go/endopioidabuse to learn about more ways to combat opioid abuse and help patients live healthier lives.